

Sexual Harassment

Don't Ignore It, Report It!

Sexual Harassment in employment is prohibited.

A sexual harassment victim can be either the same sex or the opposite sex of the harasser.

Examples of sexual harassment include:

Unwelcome sexually suggestive comments, gestures, e-mails, or pictures

Unwelcome physical contact

Requesting sexual favors for employment benefits

Threats that suggest a relationship (sexual or personal) is necessary for better treatment in the workplace (ex. employment, promotion)

Employers can be held responsible for:

The conduct of supervisors and other representatives

The conduct of non-supervisory/managerial staff, if the employer is aware of misconduct and fails to take corrective action

If you believe you have been a victim of sexual harassment in employment, don't ignore it, report it to the CCHR.
