Nobel Peace Prize Winners to Bring Message of Human Rights and Peace to 17 Chicago Public Schools

U.S. Secretary of State Clinton announces students from conflict regions to visit U.S., participate in 12th World Summit of Nobel Peace Laureates

CHICAGO—The Chicago World Summit Host Committee today announced that Nobel Peace Laureates will kick off the 12th World Summit of Nobel Peace Laureates by visiting 17 Chicago public high schools on the morning of April 23, the opening day of the three-day summit. Individual laureates and top representatives from laureate organizations will engage students on the issues of peace and human rights around the world.

Joining the laureates on the school visits will be 16 students and four teachers from conflict regions including Timor Leste, Liberia, Yemen and Bangladesh. The students will visit the U.S. for three weeks this spring, including full participation in the Summit. The Youth Exchange is being organized by the U.S. State Department's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs. Secretary Clinton provided a special video message about the State Department's youth initiatives surrounding the 12th World Summit. “Our students come from every nation, ethnicity, and background,” said Mayor Emanuel, honorary co-chair of the 12th World Summit Host Committee. “I am honored that Nobel Peace Prize winners will visit 17 of Chicago’s public schools to discuss their crusade for human rights and peace giving our students an experience that will both inspire them and give them something to aspire to.”

“Hosting the Nobel Peace Laureates in our schools is a tremendous honor for this District, as well as an amazing opportunity for our students,” said Chicago Public Schools CEO Jean-Claude Brizard. “I want to thank the Summit leaders and the Robert F. Kennedy Center for Justice and Human Rights for their continuous support of our schools and the academic success of our students. Discussing the issues surrounding peace and human rights is critical to the world we live in right now and it is vital for our students to be a part of the global discussion.”

Laureates will each visit one Chicago public high school, with the exception of some circumstances where two laureates or laureate organizations will attend one school together. Many of the schools receiving laureates have been studying a special human rights curriculum, Speak Truth To Power, that uses the experiences of courageous defenders, including Nobel Peace Laureates, to educate students about human rights. Speak Truth To Power was developed by the Robert F. Kennedy Center for Justice and Human Rights.

Schools participating in the laureate visits include:
