CHICAGO NAMED TOP METRO FOR NEW AND EXPANDING COMPANIES
Site Selection Magazine Recognized Chicago Area as Top Metro for Second Year; Chicago reports more than 620 Corporate Expansions which Created Over 21,000 Jobs and Generated $6.8 Billion in Investment in 2014

Mayor Rahm Emanuel today announced that for the second year in a row, Chicago was named the “Top Metro” in the nation* for corporate investment by Site Selection magazine, considered the “industry scoreboard for corporate investment and relocation professionals.” The publication recognized that the Chicago area saw more new or expanded corporate facilities than any other metro area in 2014.

“This recognition reaffirms the upward trajectory of Chicago’s economy. It shows that by making the right investments and following the right strategy, we are giving more companies the confidence they need to create jobs right here in the City of Chicago,” said Mayor Rahm Emanuel. “From the depth of our talent to the strength of our transportation, more and more companies see a city on the move. They see Chicago building a bright economic future in all of our neighborhoods that they want to be a part of.”

The March issue of the publication ranks metropolitan areas across the country based on new and expanding company growth. World Business Chicago (WBC) tracked 624 expansion projects accounting for more than 21,000 jobs created and $6.8 billion in investments in 2014; approximately half of these projects were included in Site Selection’s rankings.

Both the central business district and neighborhood expansion remained strong. Chicago’s ranking took into account 95 companies expanding in neighborhoods outside of the central business district, comprising more than 2,800 jobs created and $1.3 billion in investment.

The industries showing the most growth were manufacturing, education, retail and business services and include companies located across dozens of neighborhoods including Avondale, where Coyote Logistics has created 500 new jobs; Ashburn, where Oak Street Health is creating 300 jobs; Clearing, where Meade has created 200 jobs; Archer Heights’ Focal Point which created 50 jobs in 2014, and many others across the Near North Side, Near South Side, Lower West Side, Pullman and West Town neighborhoods, among others.

“In 2014 we’ve noticed a wide array of growth areas – from neighborhood business development to strategic partnerships with our counterparts overseas,” said World Business Chicago President & CEO Jeff Malehorn. “We see Site Selection’s top honor as proof that our efforts to drive Chicago’s growth in GRP, employment, productivity, income and wages are setting in.”

“Chicago’s back-to-back number one ranking in Site Selection’s “Top Metros” serves to underscore the strength of the city’s appeal,” said Site Selection Senior Editor Patty Rasmussen. “The combination of Chicago’s logistical assets, available intellectual capital and diverse business sectors, coupled with a thriving innovation and startup culture, make the city a dynamic choice for investors and site selectors.”

In addition, the number of tracked international companies new to, or expanding in, Chicago increased to 149 in 2014 from 114 in 2013.

Chicago’s diverse economy, with no greater than 14 percent of employees in any one industry, puts the city in a prime position as companies embrace new technologies needed to power their next generation growth. Its strong and diverse talent pool also remains a key reason companies continue to locate and expand in Chicago.

Highlights of the region’s growth are detailed in WBC’s 2014 Business Growth Profile, released today in conjunction with the Site Selection announcement. The Business Growth Profile sums up 2014 business activity in the metro area, noting positive trends in employment growth, consumer spending, and real estate markets as indicators of the region’s sustained economic recovery.

Chaired by Mayor Emanuel, World Business Chicago drives regional economic growth. WBC collaborates to create jobs, cultivate talent, and put Chicago at the forefront of the global economy. A unique public-private partnership, WBC engages business and community leaders to advance Chicago’s Plan for Economic Growth and Jobs.
